

Modern Militiaman

A Journal of the Modern Resistance Movement

Issue #13, Nov.-Dec., 1999

Purpose and Dedication: This electronic and limited print newsletter is dedicated to the modern militiamen and women of the American Resistance Movement. The writers, editors, and contributors of this newsletter have by their talents become leading actors within the overall Patriot movement, be they militiamen, common-law jurists, tax-protesters, Freemen, shortwave talk-show hosts, Libertarians, Conspiracy Theorists or other assorted Rebels with a cause. We are an unruly bunch.

Most of the feeds and articles to this newsletter come off the Internet or electronic mail, which is the Gutenberg device of choice. Far-flung, quick, cheap, and secure, the Internet is a growing web of information which cannot be stopped or effectively censored. While at least one copy of each issue will be printed in order to take advantage of 1st Amendment press protections, thus blanketing the electronic edition, this and every issue is designed to be pulled apart and redesigned for every region, for every portion of the former Sweet Land of Liberty, to be used by Patriots everywhere. The opinions expressed in this newsletter are the opinions only of the authors, nobody else. The result should be freedom, not peace.

This is the 13th issue. This issue is dedicated to expelling informants and collabortrators who are betraying the Movement to the Evil Empire.

Concerning Racial Patriots

CONstitutionalist Paytriots

The past few months have been the most destructive that the already defunct militia movement has faced. It has also been the most useful in that the sides for a great total revolutionary civil war which will absolutely destroy the American Evil Empire have been chosen. The Evil Empire recently released a rightly named propaganda piece called "Project Megiddo" which largely names the sides -- religious, racial, political, and class -- which will bring about Armageddon. Coinciding with this report, the various media organs of the criminal regime have revealed that most of the open militia groups -- rightly suspected of harboring regimeist infill-traitors, snitches, and agents provocateur -- have been collaborating for years with the internal occupation military and police forces, national, state, and local.

On the side of the NWO/ZOG Evil Empire are the CONstitutional paytriots who love a form of governmental domination. On the side of their respective Peoples are the Racial Nationalists and their Racial Religious counterparts who will ensure that the current revolutionary civil war will not end until either one side or the others are totally annihilated. Yellow, brown, red, black or white, they have genocide firmly in sight. While they well may cut a deal for a racial homeland of their own with the other racial nationalists, every racial patriot hates the multi-racial, multi-cultural Evil CONstitutional Empire, and not one of them will be happy until the Empire has gone the way of Nineveh and Tyre. Thus it is a case of CONstitutional- regimeist paytriot versus Racial Patriot. The Racial Patriot shall win, because all they have to do is to destroy the Evil Empire. The weaponry for Armageddon is lying around for anyone who wishes to grasp the sword.

The Combatants in Missouri:

Four years ago, in Nov. 1995, I was publishing a paper 'zine called "The Southwestern Missouri Libertarian." In this political 'zine I wrote an article called "The Combatants of Revolution" in which I agreed with the political anthropologist Dr. Lothrop Stoddard's 1922 classic "The Revolt Against Civilization" in that revolutions are fought by revolutionary elites of less than two percent of the highest mental capacity fighting against an indifferent horde led badly by rotten reactionaries of small ability clinging to the power they abused. Let us examine Dr. Stoddard's analysis again:

"The mere fact that the revolutionists are a minority is no safeguard, because it is determined minorities, not passive majorities, that get their way. The lesson of past revolutions, particularly the Russian Bolshevik Revolution, is that a small but resolute faction possesses the same decisive tactical advantage as a small but highly disciplined and enthusiastic army attacking a huge but ill-organized and spiritless foe. In such cases the assailants have the inestimable advantage of knowing what they want and exactly where they mean to make their attack. The defenders, on the contrary, not only do not know their own minds, but also usually fail to see precisely where, when and how the attack is coming. They stand, fearful and irresolute, waiting to be hit -- beaten before they are struck."

-- Lothrop Stoddard, AM, PhD (Harvard), "The Revolt Against Civilization," p. 230, \(c\) 1922.

And this has never been more so the case than today, in an era of biological weaponry where a small faction can literally destroy not only an entire government but the social order and People upon which that regime lives.

Now back in 1995 I had a good deal of confidence in the Missouri 51st Militia. I even acted as one of their local political agents and submitted a report for them in which they acted on behalf of someone being persecuted in an adjoining county by the corrupt sheriff and the BATF. Of course that was long before the Missouri 51st Militia was in the habit of giving their membership lists over to the instigators of Waco, the Burn-All-Toddlers-First feral fedrule gang and openly collaborated with the FBI. Now while I was questioning the usefulness of the CONstitution in getting us White People under its thumb, and how it would never ever be able to successfully reform without ripping the Evil Empire apart, I was at that time merely a silent Christian Israelite and merely sympathetically predisposed to White Nationalism. I even thought that the so-called CONstitutional militia movement had a purpose for existing, and supported some degree of suburban and rural militia cooperation.

But things changed since 1995. The so-called CONstitutional militias did not go on to become a cadre of Revolutionary activists. Rather, they simply milled about like herd animals around their golden-calf, the CONstitution; refused to acknowledge that it had always been illegal to raise a private army in opposition to the criminal regime's monopoly on violence and force; loudly yelped to anyone who would listen that "We are NOT racist" and wasted time picketing less than a dozen Klansmen holding a rally in some pissant rural hamlet; and started yapping about how the very internal security forces of the NWO that they had been bitching about at Waco, were all of a sudden, "legitimate government forces just doing their jobs." If that is so, then why name your militia group the Missouri 51st Militia after the 51-day siege at Waco?

And this was the exact same pattern which took place all across America. Timothy McVeigh, the Manchurian Oswald who got his cell infiltrated and/or was provided for with a truck bomb to signal the second bomb's demolition charges on the Murrah Building's support columns, was not treated with uneasy gratitude for attacking a legitimate military target of the Evil Empire, but rather was vilified by the militia- general payriot movement scared by the actual doing of their florid rhetoric. The Republic of Texas secessionists threatened by the security forces of the county, state and empire outside where they were holed up. The militia generals tripped over themselves to explain how since the R.O.T. had seceded, they thus had no CONstitutional rights worth protecting by CONstitutional militias. In the years since Waco the CONstitutional militias have always found some way to justify their cowardice.

All of this stands to reason. The average militia member was a eunuchoid fat white suburbanite who was anxious that his white-collar job was disappearing because of NAFTA/GATT and other NWO schemes. Most of them only bought a military- style semi-automatic rifle because Bush/Clinton had put a ban on them, thus they decided to form a militia in order to play with their new, forbidden toys. While almost all of them had participated in "White flight," none of them had the balls to say or even admit: "Yes, I fled the city to avoid niggers and greasers." And they all looked down on their rural or small-town brethren who wanted nothing to do with living next to those these suburban whiggers pretended to love but did actually hate and fear as much, if not more, than honest rural Whites. In turn, the rural white militia organizations, naturally split up into friends and family cells, resented this condescension and grew angry over the larger suburban militias' refusal to follow even the very least of internal security principles.

I went to a number of state militia meetings, and the suburban militias like the Kansas City Missouri 51st and St. Louis 1st Missouri Volunteers would be dressed up in their PX be-ribboned camouflage uniform finery, while the four or five rural militias would send their headmen dressed in flannel shirts or service-issue field jackets. These suburban militias would treat the rural militia leaders like they were their commanding officers. But what annoyed the rural militias the most, at least in Missouri, was the practice of inviting the public to state militia meetings. After all, if every small rural militia was only supposed to bring along their CO and XO, then why throw the entire meeting open to the public?

As a result, there were differences in class, racial policies, structure, and internal security arrangements. As a result, the rural militias in Missouri went altogether underground in line with their inherent cell structure, and resumed or started thinking politically in terms of racial and religious lines. The suburban militias like the Missouri 1st Volunteers of St. Louis disbanded or like the Missouri 51st Militia became collaborators with the FBI and BATF in identifying their present membership and telling what they know about the rural militias which went underground. The remaining suburban militiamen who do not collaborate with the FBI/BATF/police remain in a state of denial in which racial nationalism or religious Christian fundamentalist hostility to 'J*ws' and mulattos/mestizos are forbidden subjects for thought, much less frank discussion.

Yet in the Ozark region of Southern Missouri and Northern Arkansas, lands populated by hillbillies or "Mountain Whites" who largely came from the English/Scottish Borderlands in England, much of the population is highly amenable to White Nationalism and to Identity Christianity. In fact, there are probably more Identity Christian churches in this area than even in Western North Carolina or out West in Colorado. As far as White Nationalism s concerned, the poor Whites always hated and despised blacks, although there were never hardly any of them ever around. It is the incursion of Mexicans to fill the Tyson's chicken plants which has most Whites roiled up now. It is in mountainous areas like the Ozarks, Appalachia, East Texas which are strongholds for White Racial patriotism and fundamentalist Christianity. These areas have created much more than usual Resistance fighting men and political and religious leadership.

Thus the activities of false payriots in collaborating, snitching, and provoking are regarded as nothing less than treason to our People and our People's Faith. I doubt that I could adequately describe the searing, corrosive contempt and hatred that racial and religious patriots in the Resistance hold for those filthy pro-regimeist racial paytriot scalawag traitors who would destroy our People for thirty pieces of CONstitutional silver. We hate and despise them and their Establishment Whigger-Supremacist masters, lawyers, politicians, businessmen, media-whores and police far more than we do the satanic ashkenaz-gogsspawn khazar 'j*ws,' congoids, mestizos, gooks or any other form of mongrel mamzers because these racial aliens are merely acting according to their nature. Since they betrayed their own People, the natural aristocracy which will save the People must and will make sure that these racial traitors are disposed of through banishment, slavery, and outright execution upon successful prosecution of the revolutionary civil war.

The Four Main Factions of the Evil Empire.

1. The faction ruling today is the WhiggerGliberal- Ashkenaz ruling class and their enforcers and assorted lackeys. This consists of perhaps 10% of the population all told. Politicians, their police, lawyers, judges, corrupt businessmen are the foremost beneficiaries of their imperial misrule. They keep the White middle-class and poor politically dispossessed and maintain their hold over the blacks and mestizos through imprisonment and "Uncle Tom" leadership. Their present aim is to secure their NWO/ZOG plantation by means of destroying the White race and creating a docile brown race via miscegenation, immigration, and confiscatory taxation of Whites so that they cannot replace themselves and maintain an adequate lifestyle. The political vehicle by which they maintain the illusion of competent governance is the CONstitution, which they foisted off onto the foolish Whites and their sovereign local governments over 200 years ago. Now the Evil Empire and their lackeys ("whigger nationalists") try desperately to maintain their imperial misrule by means of indoctrination, persuasion, and, if necessary, by force applied internally by their militarized police and externally by their internationalized armed forces.

2. The mass of the Whites who are poor and middle class, and their natural aristocracy, the White Nationalist Resistance. Nominally Christian, they are in fact led astray by every jewdeo-churchianity hustler, con-man, and pimp pretending to be a religious authority. Nominally literate, their children have been for the past four generations herded to public schools where they are indoctrinated to love the corrupt imperial regime, and how to serve it by periodic sacrifices of their blood serving in the multi-national armed forces; sacrifices of their substance by voluntarily confessing every detail of their financial lives and then sending half of their earnings so that they cannot afford to have even two White children; sacrifices of their seed by sending what children they do have off to the state-mandated indoctrination centers where they learn to become even more witless slaves.

The vast majority of these 'Whites' are nothing more than human herd animals. However, there are a certain number of them which have more intelligence and will than the majority, and as a result this natural elite decides that they must engage in armed rebellion against the treasonous/alien Gliberal-Ashkenaz ruling imperialist supremacists for the benefit of the White Race. This revolutionary natural elite never numbers over 5%, most commonly from 2-4.5%, yet this natural elite either survives and prevails in order to re-assert the rights of their People, or they are eliminated. Their People, lacking racial leadership, are destroyed absolutely.

In an era of empire run amok, it is far better that much of the herd be sacrificed in the civil war in order for the survivors to be stronger and unwilling to support the Gliberal-Ashkenaz supremacist global plantation owners. Thus the goal of this White revolutionary elite is to bring about revolutionary and civil warfare necessary to destroy the Gliberal-Ashkenaz ruling imperialists and the White herd animals which support their own destruction. Thus the only acceptable solution is White revolution ending with the thorough extermination of the Gliberal-Ashkenaz ruling class and their lackeys, and the imposition of sovereign White racial nation-states under a military dictatorship of the White natural elite by any and all means necessary. To attain these ends, it is acceptable to make civil-war time alliances with the blacks and the mestizos.

3. The Blacks and their Black Nationalist leaders. The mass of blacks have no great love of Whites, any Whites. However, within the Black community there have been Black Nationalist leaders like Booker T. Washington, Marcus Garvey, Malcolm X, and Louis Farrakhan who have informed their people that it was up to them, not the White man, to provide for themselves and in their own country. It is possible and likely that White Nationalists and Black Nationalist leaders will come to an agreement in that the Gliberal-Ashkenaz Evil Empire must be destroyed, and that the Blacks, if they remain numerous at the end of the total civil war, will be allowed to make over the flatlands of the Deep South as a Bantustan(s) as their own separate homeland, in which Whites are disallowed.

4. The Mestizos in the Southwest. For the past 25 years mestizos from Mexico and Latin America have taken over the former American Southwest from Texas to California to the point where they are the majority of the population. These mestizos despise and detest Whites other than for their ability to make things run better than in their native lands which they left because of their homelands' corruption and poverty. Many of these mestizos call these territories that they have in fact re-conquered "Nuevo Atzlan" after a supposed Aztec cradle of civilization. It is but a matter of time before these numerous mestizos take over and hold much of the Southwest. They will be able to keep it at least for a while because neither the imperial Gliberal- Ashkenaz ruling class nor the White Resistance has the muscle to take this alien land back. The Gliberal-Ashkenaz imperialists may try to use White blood to do so, but White Nationalist leaders should and will instead agree with this partition as long as the "Nuevo Atzlan" leadership only robs and kills Gliberal-Ashkenaz "whigger nationalists" and assorted imperialist stooges and those Whites who insist on staying in racially foreign conquered territory.

The fact of the matter is that the Racial Nationalists, be they White, Black, or Brown, have far more in common with each other than they do the Establishment Whigger Nationalists and NWO/ZOG global plantation owners. After all, the spoils to be made by destroying the Empire are desired by each and every faction leader. As the Empire continues to decay, and the various racial elements all demand to have it all, it is but a matter of time before the Empire is assailed on all sides. Eventually, the Racial Nationalist leaders will cut a deal with other Racial Nationalists, and the loot will be provided by taking it from the Whigger NWO/ZOG Establishment. From those who have to those who are able to take. Furthermore, the hatred will be most concentrated along intra-racial lines, as Whites will most assuredly be most brutal to the whigger supremacist imperial Establishment who betrayed their racial heritage for a mess of pottage.

Now this is not to deny that there will be absolute racial war as the Evil Empire breaks up. Whites and Blacks and Hispanics will indeed practice racial cleansing within their own racial enclaves. However, within these racial enclaves, there will be intra-racial warfare between the servants of the imperial Establishment and the respective Racial Nationalists, and nowhere will this intra-racial warfare be more intense than between White Nationalists and Whigger Nationalists. As it is, there exists tacit (and some overt) agreements between rural White Nationalists and urban Black/Hispanic Nationalists that the blacks and mestizos can rape, loot and pillage all they want within the urban and suburban city limits. This way, the imperial Establishment and their whigger herd animals can fully enjoy the consequences of their lies and foolishness. After all, there is nothing more satisfyingly just than to see some negro gang kill White pigs, burn down newspaper offices and TV stations, then go to the homes of some whigger social worker or bureaucrats and gang-rape their women, castrate the males, and eat their guts for chitterlings. On that day of Justice, no White Nationalist should lift a finger to stop these consequences from happening. Let the Imperial Establishment and their herd animals learn the hard way the due consequences of racial treason, when White Nationalists sit by or collude with the other Racial Nationalists to remove not only their imperial riches and regime power, but their very treasonous lives as well.

The Payriot Movement's Internal Civil War.

Likewise the same goes within the remnants of the militia movement. What remains of this payriot CONstitutional militia-general movement is currently being whip-sawed between the various factions of Payriot militia generals and the imperial regime's mass of informants and agents provocateur.

For the past couple of years, the various payriot CONstitutional militia-general movement factions, each and every one proclaiming to be a 'legal' CONstitutional militia and how "We are not racist" have been doing nothing except sniping at each other and informing the imperial police concerning the most militant and racially patriotic of its former members who have gone underground. News stories preceding and following the Feral Bureau of Imperialism's "Project Megiddo" have revealed that the Missouri 51st Militia, the VanHuizen/Wayne faction of the Michigan Militia Corps, the Montana Militia, every branch and vine of the Tri- States Militia/Coalition and various other militia generals remaining after the political collapse of the militia- general movement at Knob Creek on April 19, 1998, are informing the FBI about what they know of racial patriots of the White Nationalist, Christian Identity, and Neo-Odinist persuasion, who have split up into Resistance Active Service Unit cells or gone lone-wolf.

There have been a number of arrests of White militia personnel who were indiscreet regarding the bringing about the start of a revolution at the end of this millennium by goading the Evil Empire into escalating the current revolutionary civil war by roundups of dissident White elements and declaring martial 'law.' What has brought these largely racial patriot militia leaders down, as happened in 1996-1997, was befriending regimeist agents provocateur that they brought into their militias, and the lies that these informants told an increasingly panicky Evil Empire seeing White Nationalist revolutionaries under every bush, rock or tree.

So what brought these racially patriotic militia leaders or soldiers down? Exceedingly sloppy internal security because they did not put into practice organizational principles of "leaderless resistance" as wisely enunciated by Louis Beam. Proper organization is nine-tenths of any effective measure of internal security. Thus any open public CONstitutional militia led by egomaniacs, psychotics, blustering buffoons, informants, regimeist agents provocateur, etc., in a hierarchical structure is guaranteed to be compromised from day one of its organization. Conversely, a Resistance Active Service Unit (RASU) cell is composed up of only blood relations or friends of long standing which predate the militia-general CONstitutional payriot agent-provocateur movement. Just as in the successful Provisional Irish Republican Army/Sein Fein partnership, Resistance cells do not indulge in any political/propaganda efforts other than the "propaganda of the deed." They leave political struggle and propaganda generation to White Nationalist political activists, Identity Christian pastors, or Neo-Wodenist priests who can in no way be directly linked to the deeds of the Resistance cells or lone wolves.

Did the two California militiamen falsely accused by an informant in their ranks probably intend to do what the Feral Bureau of Imperialism decided was code for setting fire to some huge propane tanks? Probably not. But yet this flimsy circumstantial tissue of lies regarding intent will be enough to at least put these two away indefinitely without bail at least until after Y2K is over. Probably longer with a regimeist jury. What brought these pore entrapped fools down and out for the Y2K count? An informant? NO! The informant is merely a symptom -- lack of proper Resistance organization and its built-in internal security safeguards was the cause for their entrapment, false arrest and probable incarceration.

Likewise the recent stampede following the arrest on Wednesday, Dec. 8, 1999 of Don Beauregard, commander of the 77th Brigade of Florida militia. Mr. Beauregard is accused by Freeh's Biologicals, Inc. of "Project Worst Nightmare," an alleged plot to destroy power plants by means of, if you can believe this federal lie, supposedly overpowering National Guard units and stealing their armories. However, anyone who has been around in the militia movement knows that “Project Worst Nightmare” was a fax sheet alleged to have originated from Brad Glover, now imprisoned for several years in a federal facility, at the time of the Montana Freeman standoff of 1996. The Feral Bureau of Imperialism merely dusted off a hoary urban legend and fed it to the media.

Mr. Beauregard, a young promising real militia leader (who was never heard to disparage the legitimate political, religious, and racial concerns of White patriots), is now facing trumped-up conspiracy charges along with alleged violations of imperial criminal-regimeist legis-treason regarding allowable weaponry for a legitimate patriotic organization, which has not yet been overtly banned politically. Mr. Beauregard’s problem is the one or two or several dozen infill-traitors and agents provocateur (doubtless all yammering about how they were not “not racist” or how they were “CONstitutional paytriots”) he foolishly allowed to be in his open, public CONstitutional militia. What difference did it make whether these snitches were his fellow militia-generals from the Southeast States Alliance or a Haines City police officer? After all, foolish drunken talk over a case or two of Budweiser about fantasies best kept silent is what has gotten poor foolish Mr. Beauregard held without bail for a conspiracy rap and some planted weaponry. Now Mr. Beauregard will face a quick perjury-parlor trial in a fedrule regime-kort for the ‘crime’ of “Drinking While White.” Mr. Beauregard bids fair to become the Bob Starr of 1999.

Mr. Beauregard screwed up. While he had a tolerance for the racial patriotism of his White kinsmen, Mr. Beauregard let himself be surrounded by all manner of fools, incompetents, liars, informants, and other CONstitutional paytriot offal. After the collapse of Dave Rydel’s u.S. Theater Command at the Knob Creek fiasco of April 19, 1998, a breakaway militia organization called the Southeast States Alliance was formed. What did they do next? They held a “field training exercise” in May of 1998 in which known informants from the Tri-States Militia/Coalition, namely ‘Colonel’ Red Mike Vanderboegh and the former ‘Colonel’ John Parson’s adulterous shack-up Pam Beezley were allowed to attend. Some Alabama Bureau of Investigation police showed up to review the militia exercises, and Pam Beezley took pictures of them and their police vehicles. Red Mike, (an overweight fat slob continually on the hunt for Identity Christians and White Nationalists ala Morris Dees of the SPLC) demanded that Beezley turn over the film with the pictures of the ABI personnel and vehicles and Beezley refused. According to most of the accounts of the goings-on that day, Red Mike pulled his 1911-model .45 Colt/penis substitute on Beezley until she handed over the film. This did not go over too well with the rank-and-file Southeast States Alliance militiamen. They wondered what the deal was.

What does this go to show? Mr. Beauregard showed a fatal unconcern for the kind of people he allowed himself and his fellow militiamen to be around. The state and local imperial police were not his friends. They looked upon Mr. Beauregard and the other stupid militia generals who were not informants as rebellious White goyim chattel out to start a peasant’s revolt. Is it any wonder that probably the best, most energetic, most promising of these rebellious peasants would be betrayed by the lies of the criminal- regimeist agents provocateur he foolishly allowed to swarm around him? Even if this pack of lies collapses after Y2K is over, still Mr. Beauregard has demonstrated improper judgment in getting framed and compromised when he had all of three years to disband his militia and become either a political operative or to have formed a network of underground cells.

Now all the members of the Southeastern States Alliance are living in a state of siege, scared that the feds will pull a Waco or Ruby Ridge on them. They talk foolish talk about how they are going to be able to keep from being killed by means of their proven-unreliable militia friends. The reality is that the experienced arsonists, baby-killers, and corrupt praetorian wife-shooters of Freeh’s Biologicals, Inc., can put them in a world of HRT any time Jackboot Janet decides it is time to do something “for the children.” Faced with that reality, the former commander of the Southeastern States Militia, Rick Ainsworth cravenly resigned on Dec. 14, 1999.

As a result of FBI provocation, the paytriotic CONstitutional militia generals are now running around fearful that they will be picked up next. To further the absurdity, the numerous informants, agents provocateur, and caught militia-generals turned double-agent are now on the Internet listservers screaming about how everyone is going to be rounded up and sent to death camps. As far as I am concerned, this justifiable paranoia serves them right for running their mouths to the FiBBles in the first place about the racial patriots who went underground and formed Resistance cells or went lone-wolf. With great good luck, these cowardly psychotics who hid under color of CONstitution and a false commitment to interracial 'brotherhood' can do something useful by panicking like trapped rats and offing some pigs, and then in turn being duly Wacoized. The south Texas negro who ambushed and killed three Texican piglice by calling 911 and shooting them one by one until they killed him, Carl Drega, and the Manchurian Oswald Timothy McVeigh have each done a whole lot more for the all of the people of this multi-racial, multi- cultural Evil NWO/ZOG CONstitutional Empire than an entire garbage-scow load or three of CONstitutional patriot militia generals.

The new millennium will see the destruction of the Evil Empire by racial patriots, be they White, Black, or Brown. The carnage resulting from this revolutionary civil war fought in a total fashion using biological weaponry will probably exceed ninety percent mortality and plunge the entire planet into a new Dark Ages if it does not destroy all human life. The World Federalist notions of global imperium dreamed of by our modern nimrods will turn to ashes, as any form of government other than tribal warlord over several hundred survivors becomes impossible.

'Project Megiddo?' No, Mission Armageddon -- in a world where everyone has the weaponry and the inclination to use them. But as was said in a more stalwart age: "Let Justice be done though the whole World be destroyed."

Notes

1. Although I had been tricked by a friend into attending "Pam Beezley's Kansas City Militia" the second Saturday of Nov. 1995, where I had to sit in on an extremely idiotic 45- minute rant by a Colonel John Parsons of the Tri-States Militia. Parsons was most pissed about how ABC News only gave him 12 seconds of air time for him and Red Mike Vanderboegh's narking out a fringe CI preacher dubbed "Crazy Willie" Lampley for allegedly plotting to blow up Morris Dees and the SPLC. I complained to a Texas TSM general if he agreed with his colonel's narking people out, especially for just wanting to blow up Morris and his SPLC multi-level marketing scam. Everyone else there thought I was a bloodthirsty maniac. Beezley left her much pussy-whipped dolt of a husband and three teenage daughters as bad as she was and ran off to be Parsons' shackup. Five months later Parsons was revealed as an FBI informant. When I got home I called up the Missouri 51st Militia and told them about what I saw going on that evening at the "Pam Beezley Militia.)

For over four thousand years, MEGIDDO, a hill in northern Israel, has been the site of many battles. Ancient cities were established there to serve as a fortress on the plain of Jezreel to guard a mountain pass. As Megiddo was built and rebuilt, one city upon the other, a mound or hill was formed. The Hebrew word "Armageddon" means "hill of Megiddo." In English, the word has come to represent battle itself. The last book in the New Testament of the Bible designates Armageddon as the assembly point in the apocalyptic setting of God's final and conclusive battle against evil. The name "Megiddo" is an apt title for a project that analyzes those who believe the year 2000 will usher in the end of the world and who are willing to perpetrate acts of violence to bring that end about.

I. EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The year 2000 is being discussed and debated at all levels of society. Most of the discussions regarding this issue revolve around the topic of technology and our society's overwhelming dependence on the multitude of computers and computer chips which make our world run smoothly. However, the upcoming millennium also holds important implications beyond the issue of computer technology. Many extremist individuals and groups place some significance on the next millennium, and as such it will present challenges to law enforcement at many levels. The significance is based primarily upon either religious beliefs relating to the Apocalypse or political beliefs relating to the New World Order (NWO) conspiracy theory. The challenge is how well law enforcement will prepare and respond.

The following report, entitled "Project Megiddo," is intended to analyze the potential for extremist criminal activity in the United States by individuals or domestic extremist groups who profess an apocalyptic view of the millennium or attach special significance to the year 2000. The purpose behind this assessment is to provide law enforcement agencies with a clear picture of potential extremism motivated by the next millennium. The report does not contain information on domestic terrorist groups whose actions are not influenced by the year 2000.

There are numerous difficulties involved in providing a thorough analysis of domestic security threats catalyzed by the new millennium. Quite simply, the very nature of the current domestic terrorism threat places severe limitations on effective intelligence gathering and evaluation. Ideological and philosophical belief systems which attach importance, and possibly violence, to the millennium have been well-articulated. From a law enforcement perspective, the problem therefore is not a lack of understanding of motivating ideologies: The fundamental problem is that the traditional focal point for counterterrorism analysis -- the terrorist group -- is not always well-defined or relevant in the current environment.

The general trend in domestic extremism is the terrorist's disavowal of traditional, hierarchical, and structured terrorist organizations. Even well-established militias, which tend to organize along military lines with central control, are characterized by factionalism and disunity. While several "professional" terrorist groups still exist and present a continued threat to domestic security, the overwhelming majority of extremist groups in the United States have adopted a fragmented, leaderless structure where individuals or small groups act with autonomy. Clearly, the worst act of domestic terrorism in United States history was perpetrated by merely two individuals: Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols. In many cases, extremists of this sort are extremely difficult to identify until after an incident has occurred. Thus, analysis of domestic extremism in which the group serves as the focal point of evaluation has obvious limitations.

The Project Megiddo intelligence initiative has identified very few indications of specific threats to domestic security. Given the present nature of domestic extremism, this is to be expected. However, this is a function of the limitations of the group-oriented model of counterterrorism analysis and should not be taken necessarily as reflective of a minor or trivial domestic threat. Without question, this initiative has revealed indicators of potential violent activity on the part of extremists in this country. Militias, adherents of racist belief systems such as Christian Identity and Odinism, and other radical domestic extremists are clearly focusing on the millennium as a time of action. Certain individuals from these various perspectives are acquiring weapons, storing food and clothing, raising funds through fraudulent means, procuring safe houses, preparing compounds, surveying potential targets, and recruiting new converts. These and other indicators are not taking place in a vacuum, nor are they random or arbitrary. In the final analysis, while making specific predictions is extremely difficult, acts of violence in commemoration of the millennium are just as likely to occur as not. In the absence of intelligence that the more established and organized terrorist groups are planning millennial violence as an organizational strategy, violence is most likely to be perpetrated by radical fringe members of established groups. For example, while Aryan Nations leader Richard Butler publicly frowns on proactive violence, adherents of his religion or individual members of his organization may commit acts of violence autonomously.

Potential cult-related violence presents additional challenges to law enforcement. The potential for violence on behalf of members of biblically-driven cults is determined almost exclusively by the whims of the cult leader. Therefore, effective intelligence and analysis of such cults requires an extensive understanding of the cult leader. Cult members generally act to serve and please the cult leader rather than accomplish an ideological objective. Almost universally, cult leaders are viewed as messianic in the eyes of their followers. Also, the cult leader's prophecies, preachings, orders, and objectives are subject to indiscriminate change. Thus, while analysis of publicly stated goals and objectives of cults may provide hints about their behavior and intentions, it is just as likely to be uninformed or, at worst, misleading. Much more valuable is a thorough examination of the cult leader, his position of power over his followers, and an awareness of the responding behavior and activity of the cult. Sudden changes in activity - for example, less time spent on "Bible study" and more time spent on "physical training" - indicate that the cult may be preparing for some type of action.

The millennium holds special significance for many, and as this pivotal point in time approaches, the impetus for the initiation of violence becomes more acute. Several religiously motivated groups envision a quick, fiery ending in an apocalyptic battle. Others may initiate a sustained campaign of terrorism in the United States to prevent the NWO. Armed with the urgency of the millennium as a motivating factor, new clandestine groups may conceivably form to engage in violence toward the U.S. Government or its citizens.

Most importantly, this analysis clearly shows that perceptions matter. The perceptions of the leaders and followers of extremist organizations will contribute much toward the ultimate course of action they choose. For example, in-depth analysis of Y2K compliancy on the part of various key sectors that rely on computers has determined that, despite a generally positive outlook for overall compliance, there will be problem industries and minor difficulties and inconveniences. [1] If they occur, these inconveniences are likely to cause varying responses by the extreme fringes. Members of various militia groups, for example, have identified potentially massive power failures as an indication of a United Nations-directed NWO takeover. While experts have indicated that only minor brownouts will occur, various militias are likely to perceive such minor brownouts as indicative of a larger conspiracy. [2]

The Senate Special Committee on the Year 2000 Technology Problem has stated that some state and local governments could be unprepared, including the inability to provide benefits payments. [3] This could have a significant impact in major urban areas, resulting in the possibility for civil unrest. Violent white supremacists are likely to view such unrest as an affirmation of a racist, hate-filled world view. Likewise, militia members who predict the implementation of martial law in response to a Y2K computer failure would become all the more fearful.

I came across your web page, and thought you might want to be a little more informed about the Missouri 51st. I am not here to discredit anyone, however I have some truths that you might find very interesting. I almost took the oath and swore into the Mo. 51st, until I found these things out. Are you aware that they openly invite the BATF to come to their meetings? Does this not seem a little strange to you? I also learned that they gave (and still do to my knowledge) a list of names to the BATF of every member they have. They will openly admit this to you if you ask about it. Their reason is that they have nothing to hide. That is wonderful that they have nothing to hide, however where do you think the BATF will strike first if they have an open invitation? We all know what happened in Waco, Texas. Why would anyone willingly put their organization, their people, and their beliefs in the same path of destruction on purpose?! I find it extremely irritating to see other patriots taken in by them. I personally can not see them as any more than a glamorized political group, more concerned about their appearance to the people that take our rights away more and more every day. They claim to stand for these rights, but do they really? They stand for these rights by holding an occasional shoot and campout, and in the background reporting to the very people they are supposed to be standing up too! I find this very disturbing, and I hope that you will as well. The Missouri 103rd Division hasn't been around but for about 6 months, but we stand for the truths that this country was founded on, and we are prepared to do whatever means necessary to keep those truths and protect the constitution of the United States of America. You are correct. I wish as a matter of internal security to be well aware of what the Missouri 51st is doing. I have reason to believe that what you say is not only correct, but rather it is in all eventuality even worse than what you have said.

> I am not here to discredit anyone,

So you figured out what was going on with the Missouri 51st, and decided to not join their militia organization. This is happening more and more as people begin to wonder about the Mo 51st's divided loyalties and coziness with the federal criminal regime.

>Are you aware that they openly invite the BATF to come to their

No, I was not aware that they invite the BATF goons to their militia meetings. I was aware that they invite FBI agents to their meetings, that their CO, James McKinsey, has commanded the people of his command to not be mean to the FBI, and at one meeting of the Missouri State militia commanders openly said that the FBI is a CONstitutional federal police force with a job to do. Some of the annoyed rural militia people said to me that McKinsey is at the FBI office so often that they thought that he was working with them.

Also, one of the officers of the Missouri 51st, Carolyn Hart, was overheard to agree with the World Federalist Jon Roland, that the Christian Identity people had no right to form their own private militias and that they should be disowned as legitimate militia combatants. This was overheard on PIML, a mailing list composed mainly of revealed past infilltraitors and agents provocateurs from the pro-regimeist, anti-White, Tri-States Militia/Coalition. Thus one of the officers of the Missouri 51st is advocating a position held by the outvoted VanHuizen/Wayne faction of the Michigan Militia, which last month openly allied with the FBI against the Christian Identity Resistance movement.

The open public so-called CONstitutional suburban militias have always tended to gang up on the rural, Christian militias and collaborate with the federal criminal regime. These suburban militias simply do not have the same political goals as their rural brethren, demanding 'reform' of the multi-cultural multi-racial Evil Empire. In addition they permissively harbor spies, infilltraitors and agents provocateur and denounce an increasingly White Nationalist/Christian Identity Resistance in print and occassionally collaborating with the criminal regime.

>I also learned that they gave (and still do to my knowledge) a list of

This does not surprize me in the least. However, to be fair I think I shall ask them if this is true, although from my past observation I have little doubt that what you say is probably true.

>Their reason is that they have nothing to hide. That is wonderful that

The rural militias which they have denounced to the FBI and the BATF as being dangerous Christian Identity racist extremists. However, their betrayal done, the regime shall in turn do away with the open militia generals once the anti-militia hysteria has been whipped up.

You see the problem is that most of the militia talent went underground in 1995, 1996, and 1997. It left the militia generals and their regimeist parasites aboveground like beached carp in a vanishing pool of a dried-out creek bed. It also left a few Resistance politicals aboveground for communication and political purposes. The Resistance and the pro-regimeist militia generals generally loathe and despise the other side.

>We all know what happened in Waco, Texas. Why would anyone

It is because most of them are fools and some of them are regime criminals.

I would say that you have summed the Missouri 51st up pretty accurately. I used to work with them here in Southwest Missouri, but after five years they have not progressed mentally or morally in any way -- in fact they have regressed on both these points. The best man they had died four years ago and those outside the 51st saw the KC bunch clearly lose their moorings and even their sense of why they were fighting. They became increasingly interested in militia trappings of uniforms and guns and running around in the woods that they lost sight of both their reason to exist and who their enemies are. They are no longer a revolutionary cadre, but rather small-minded right-wing reactionaries demanding a 'reform' which will never come, collaborating with the criminal regime's police forces, and vaguely threatening anti-government 'extremists' of rural, white, Christian fundamentalist Identity persuasion.

I will send their officers a copy of this e-mail. They should have a chance to respond in their defense, however, I have no doubt that they have crossed the line of collaboration with the criminal regimeists several times, and have justified it as being a good thing to where they no longer know the difference between right and wrong.

I am no fan of the CONstitution -- I owe no duty to the Evil Empire it founded. My first loyalty is to my own People -- not a form of government.

Your WWW page needs more content. But I have put it up as another Missouri Militia, just as I do with any such organization with a WWW page and a chapter in Missouri.

I appreciate your using a hotmail account. I hope this is not your real name you sent to me. In any case, I don't think the Missouri 51st or its regimeist friends need to know your name, unless you insist. I routinely change names of people who send messages to me and don't bother to remember them.

I sat on your message for over a month because I was waiting to hear the news, not forthcoming, about the militia generals who met at Knob Creek to restore the militia movement they finished 18 months ago on April 19, 1998 at Knob Creek. Since I didn't hear anything, and because they would have said something if they had settled their differences, then the militia generals failed or didn't even show up. The message you sent me above is interesting because you bring up the reason for the internal civil war currently being fought between a largely White Nationalist/Christian Identity Resistance and the increasingly pro-regimeist militia movement. Last month the conflict became overt, what with the deposed faction of the Michigan Militia openly getting into bed with the FiBbIes and scared to death of the Identity Christian Resistance element come Y2K. The Missouri 51st Militia seems to be no different than these renegade Michigan militia generals.

I just wanted to take the time to thank you for your response to my mail about a month ago. You have obviously given much thought to your response, and it is greatly appreciated. You also told me of a few things I wasn't aware of. Thanks for adding the 103rd to your links, and I will be working on more content to add to it from time to time. I am interested to see what responses, if any, will be given from the 51st. After thinking about it I was in the wrong to say the 103rd stands for the constitution of the United States. We stand for us, and for our freedom. Keep up the good fight.

The "Ward and June Cleaver" militia? How embarrassing!

FBI's uneasy alliance

By Kevin Johnson, USA TODAY

GRAIN VALLEY, Mo. - Jim McKinzey, a 45-year-old roofer who wears flannel shirts during the week and camouflage on the weekends, is commander of the 51st Missouri Militia. His views of the federal government range from suspicion to contempt.

Tom Kinnally, also 45, wears a starched white shirt and a suit during the week and has an office suite in the FBI's Kansas City field office, a building known locally as the "fortress on the freeway."

In McKinzey's eyes, Kinnally, the assistant special agent in charge of an office that has jurisdiction in all of Kansas and western Missouri, is the government.

Despite their personal and philosophical differences, the militia leader and the FBI agent have struck a surprising partnership that would have been unthinkable just a few years ago. By sharing information and talking to each other in a series of meetings and casual telephone calls, these two men on opposite sides are working together to try to prevent terrorism as the millennium nears.

The FBI fears that "lone wolves," people on the fringes of the militia movement, might use the Year 2000 as an excuse to commit terrorism or other criminal acts. It believes militia groups have unique access to people whose radical views may turn violent. It worries about people such as Buford Furrow, who went on a shooting rampage at a Jewish community center in Los Angeles last summer, and Benjamin Nathaniel Smith, who killed two people before committing suicide during a Fourth of July shooting spree from Illinois to Indiana. Both had ties to white supremacist groups.

Because of such tragedies, a growing number of militia members worry that they're being unfairly associated with criminal activity. Just because they're anti-government doesn't mean they support violence and terrorism, they say. That's why they're more willing to talk to the FBI.

"I feel comfortable enough to call them up and talk whenever I feel the need or if there is something in the wind we think they should know about," McKinzey says. "We're not enemies. We have to build bridges."

This unlikely alliance, though controversial in some militia quarters, is being copied nationwide:

- * Militia leaders in Montana have been sitting down with FBI agents to exchange information described by the participants as mutually beneficial.
"We talk to them (the FBI)," says Militia of Montana leader John Trochmann, "because we want to be sure they know where we're coming from."
- * In Bloomfield, Ind., federal agents and members of at least a half dozen local militia groups met last month.
- * In Alabama, Mike Vanderboegh, commander of the 1st Cavalry Regiment Constitutional Militia, is not completely comfortable with the new relationship. But he takes the FBI's calls.
"The FBI has a helluva problem," Vanderboegh says. "They want to make sure we're not coming up on their backs. It's up to them to start the dialogue."

At best, federal agents say they have been able to open a dialogue in which militia members have provided information helpful in criminal investigations. John Bell, the FBI special agent-in-charge of the Indianapolis field office, says a militia leader passed on a tip last month involving a member who had been expelled from the group. The former member has since emerged as the target of a criminal investigation.

"Most militia organizations are not (made up of) dangerous radicals," Bell says. "They're not bombers. We want to make sure that information is passed along."

In Kansas City, Kinnally says, the office has fielded similar calls from the 51st Missouri Militia.

Yet the animosity and suspicion between the militias and the FBI haven't eased completely. Some militia leaders consider the cooperation no less than treason.

"The FBI has no interest in opening a dialogue," says Bob Wright, commanding officer of the 1st Brigade New Mexico Militia. "They're interested in gathering intelligence. They're interested in finding some weak-minded fools to hustle. Whoever is cooperating is being used as a pawn."

Not so, the FBI says. What it wants from these encounters, which were ordered by Attorney General Janet Reno and FBI Director Louis Freeh, is to reassure militia groups that they have the right to their beliefs, no matter how extreme. It's not illegal to have anti-government views, the FBI says, as long as no crime follows.

For their part, cooperation with the FBI gives militia groups an opportunity to improve their image, which was shattered when the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building was bombed in April 1995.

Since then, the militia movement has been in decline, from 858 groups in 1996 to 435 last year, according to the Southern Poverty Law Center, which monitors the militia movement and hate groups.

The bombing in Oklahoma City, in which 168 people were killed, had a lot to do with that. It was during the investigation that authorities found that the suspected bombers, Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols, shared a loose association with militia groups. During a search of Nichols' Kansas home immediately after the bombing, authorities found a business card from the 51st Missouri Militia. That brought federal agents to McKinzey's doorstep here in Grain Valley.

"That scared the daylights out of me," McKinzey says. "Of course, (Nichols) was not a member of our group. I didn't know what to expect. After we talked, I realized they (the FBI) weren't accusing me of anything. They were just there to do their job. I respected them for that. I respect them still."

That contact paved the way for meetings between the FBI and the Missouri Militia. The meetings continue today.

But the first meetings were tense. Since the fiery deaths of more than 80 men, women and children during an FBI siege of the Branch Davidian compound in Waco, Texas, in 1993, agents had been regarded in some quarters as storm troopers who would kill Americans for owning a gun.

The militia movement grew in power after Waco and a government standoff with Randy Weaver in 1992 in Ruby Ridge, Idaho. Weaver's wife, his 14-year-old son and a deputy U.S. marshall were killed in the shootout.

So when the FBI's David Tubbs, the former agent-in-charge in Kansas City, and other agents walked into a packed library conference room in Independence, Mo., in January 1996, they were hit by a chorus of insults and taunts - "baby killer!"

"It was standing-room only," says McKinzey, who estimates the crowd at more than 200. "It was pretty harried in there for a while. Put it this way: The boys were not on their best behavior."

The FBI agents weren't expecting a welcoming committee. Their strategy was to let group members vent and move on to a conversation. No matter how rough the talk, federal agents simply took it. Just for absorbing the punishment, the agents earned respect that night.

Yet the relationship that has developed since remains controversial in the militia movement. Critics say the FBI has co-opted some leaders and turned them into government informants.

Vanderboegh, Wright and others remain suspicious of the FBI because in the past, informants -- most recruited from within organizations -- have been used to infiltrate their groups. Informants have helped build cases against militia and hate organizations in the past three years in Arizona, West Virginia and Georgia, on charges ranging from the stockpiling of explosives to terrorism. Those prosecutions also have helped contribute to a thinning of the militia ranks, law enforcement officials say.

Wright of New Mexico says the FBI's recent publication of a 40-page pamphlet that assesses the potential security threat posed by extremist organizations proves that the FBI really is just interested in collecting intelligence. The pamphlet was given to local police departments.

The report, named Project Megiddo, was circulated three weeks ago as a tool for policing extremist groups, many of which attach apocalyptic meaning to Y2K. "Radical elements of the militia movement are capable and willing to commit violence against the government," the FBI warned.

As the new millennium approaches, the "impetus for the initiation of violence becomes more acute," the FBI's report says. "Several religiously motivated groups envision a quick, fiery ending in an apocalyptic battle."

But the card-carrying members of the 51st, at least those gathered recently at the home of McKinzey's brother, Mike, look anything but menacing.

John Rice, 41, programs computerized milling machines; Bill Binham, 70, is a retired freight handler; Bob Gurski, 45, is a power plant mechanic; Rick Hawkins, 43, is a telephone company manager; and Roger Mabry, 32, runs his own fire extinguisher company.

"I know them to be gentlemen," Kinnally says. "In many ways, our goals are the same as theirs. We live in the same community. Our kids go to the same schools as their kids."

In fact, the 51st is known to other militias as the "Ward and June Cleaver Bunch," a reference to the group's reputation for clean living and community service, not unlike that of the parents on the old TV show, Leave it to Beaver.

Still, McKinzey, Hawkins and others know that colleagues have criticized their willingness to help the FBI. "I saw one e-mail saying I had my own parking space at the FBI building," McKinzey says. "That doesn't bother me."

Says Hawkins: "The FBI is not the enemy. I say, let's keep talking and see what we have. I feel that if you look at somebody eyeball to eyeball, it is going to be less likely that somebody is going to come to my home and kick in my door."

That is not to say they consider themselves government lackeys.

"There may come a day," says Mike McKinzey, the 51st's public information officer, "when the FBI will have to enforce a law we don't agree with. People will then have to decide which way they are gonna go -- slavery or freedom. We don't support bad law enforcement."

The FBI's Bell says no amount of talking will resolve all of their differences.

"Some will always believe that their freedom is being compromised and the government is slowly selling out their rights under the Constitution," Bell says. "What I'm concerned about is that they don't take any action."

Militia/FiBble Collabor-treason

BLOOMFIELD, Ind. (AP) - Three FBI agents and six militia members, face to face - but there was no confrontation.

Instead, both sides sat down and tried to discuss ways to foster better relationships between the two groups. It's part of a national attempt to curtail animosity that has resulted in sometimes violent battles between anti-government groups and law enforcement in recent years.

"I think what we need to do is realize that we're all human beings and we all want to do what's morally right, though we may have different ideas on how to do that," said Albert King, a member of the Greene County Militia.

Acting on orders from FBI Director Louis Freeh and Attorney General Janet Reno, agents in the nation's 56 field offices have been trying to open lines of communication with members of militia groups in their areas. The program was established just weeks after the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City was bombed on April 19, 1995, killing 168 people.

The Wednesday meeting between FBI agents from Indianapolis and Indiana militias was the second in three months.

At the first meeting, which took place at the FBI's Indianapolis field office in August, a couple of the 10 or so militia members in attendance made conspiracy accusations and other inflammatory comments.

There was none of that at the Bloomfield meeting, which took place in a public park shelterhouse. The town is 65 miles southwest of Indianapolis.

FBI Agent Doug Garrison assured the militia members that his colleagues "aren't hiding behind every tree," watching their every move.

Roger Stalcup, a Bloomfield resident and commander of the Southern Indiana Regional Militia, said members of his group do not advocate illegal activity, and if they learn of any such plan they would be the first to report it.

"I think the FBI has demonstrated good faith in coming to the table and talking with us," he said.

Jim Floyd

Well almost, please, allow me one, out-of-season, rant, sentence.

I ain't gonna do it, I refuse to do it, and not because it shouldn't be done, of course, someone should write a bitter denunciation of Jared Taylor and his Rabbis, of course, the Council of Conservative Citizens is long overdue for a change of leadership and direction, (attention Gordo), of course, these multiple, the Laud in haben only knows how many, 'immigration clubs' should be exposed for their failure to accomplish anything, of course, Sam Francis shouldn't be featured in the Spotlight, of course, Pat Buchanan should have his mouth washed out with home-made-hog-fat soap for using the oxymoronic term "Judeo-Christian," of course, so-called Revisionist and self-worshipping writers, who expend all their energies trying to convince us that they are number one, should be reviled, of course, John Rocker and the South should never ask forgiveness at the point of a Yankee, politically correct, bayonet, of course, we Southerners will never sign the new 'loyalty oath' but we will interject all manner of pre-emptive onslaughts against Ted and Jane before Teddy does his less than Brave thing, of course, I want to and will write about all these scalawags, carpetbaggers, and their inanities, and more, but not tonight.

It's Christmas and the tender arms, the bright smiles, the shinning , hopeful eyes, and the angelic laughter of my granddaughters have mellowed this old curmudgeon.

Yesterday, the phone rang and the party hung up, so, I said, "Somebody answer that if it rings again, they hung up on me." Halle said, "they hung up on you, Paw Paw, because you're loud and don't know how to behave." She is five.

Luna, who is two, had two figurines, little plaster angels, she said, "This one is Halwee and this one is Lwuna." I took them and said "This one is Luna and this one is Paw Paw." "No, no," she snapped, "you are no angel, Paw Paw."

Well, angel or no, I am determined to continue to talk straight, continue to commit CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE, overtly, and what I do covertly, only me and G-d will ever know. Why?

Simple, because of tender arms, bright smiles, shinning , trusting, hopeful eyes, and angelic laughter.

To me friends, here at home and around the world, to those who have helped me in this struggle, to that blue-haired, little, stooped Christian Lady, who pulls my arm at the store and says, "Jim I'm still praying for you," thank you all and to you all a Merry Christ Mass.

No! Do not attempt to write anything, today.

You will receive no attention, whatsoever.

Monica L. is to testify in Washington, this morning.
And when this little Khazar princess opens her mouth, well, she grips, clutches, squeezes, and swallows-up the attention of even the most detached and prosaicminded among us.

Speaking of Clinton:

An absurd band of marauding thieves, from the bastard state of Israel, are here meeting with Billy and the Syrians.
And it ain't going too well, folks.

The silly Syrian Foreign Minister began by "opening-up old wounds." How self-serving of him, how dare he!

It is over! Give it up, get over it! What is past is past.
Why bring-up what happened 'waaay' back in 1967?

LikeYitzhak Rabin said, when confronted about the Israeli attack on the USS Liberty, 1967, "...it was so long ago, I just can't remember."

Can I hear an amen? Brother Clinton said, "Forget the past!"
The Israeli Ambassador, chimed-in and was appalled at bringing up the past sufferings of Syrians who were mutilated, massacred, and driven off the Golan.

Meanwhile, from the pity-parlors of Bonn and the US
State Department comes, concurrently, the announcement that the German people will pay billions, yet again, for alleged, communal, 'slave labor' crimes against the Khazar J-w.
Last year? No, no! Last decade? No!

Let's see, now, 39 plus 10 = 49, 49 + 10 = 59, 59 + 10 =
69 + 10 = 79, then 89, then 99, Hell fire and great burning, smoking, balls of brimstone, that was sixty frigging years ago!

So, you demand that we forget and you demand that we "never forget." And you demand that we pay 20 billion tax dollars to buy back the Golan.

Have you lost your goddamn mind? Take your selective,
Ashkenazi amnesia and stick-it!

When me son, Epsilon, reached his thirty-eighth birthday, and was still living at home, I took him out into the garden. It was spring and the baby birds were, voluntarily or otherwise, leaving the nests and I said, "see, my son, how natural it is for the mommy birds to kick their, near grown, nest-fouling little dependents out into the mean old world to make it on their own."

It's so normal, so sane. So? So? Why can't we kick these bird-faced, beak-nosed, little Khazars out? Out of our minds and out of our billfolds. Out!

Last night, I dreamed I was a priest. Pat Buchanan came and I heard his confession. He was truly contrite and we talked for a long while about 'the wicked and slothful servant who hid his talents in the ground.'

Oh Pat, me said, I'd rather go on a holyland tour with John Hagee and Jerry Falwell than to criticize ye, but you are not living up to your full potential. Get out there, my son, and talk straight, talk in public as you talk in private. Do the unexpected and say the unsayable.

Suddenly, I began to speak new words, say Judeo-Moslem ethics, say Khazareo-Christian-Zionist ethics, say Judeo-African ethics, play their game, confuse the hell-out-of-'um, but never again, my son, use the embarrassing 'Judeo-Christian' cuss word to describe our peoples' integrity.

And, just as suddenly, the redemptive answer came, and I told our dear Patrick what he must do to regain our trust and atone for his mediocrity.

You must, immediately, appear on the Larry Kagan (King) show with Billy Safire and Alan Dershowitz. You will strip nude, paint your body Celtic blue, from head to toe, and proceed to beat the living dog excrement out of these two worthless, racist, scoundrels.

These righteous acts will not make you president but they will secure for you a lasting place, in our hearts, as our second Saint Patrick.

Then I began to feel very dirty. I found meself sitting on a bar stool next to Donald Trump. We were in that go-go place on the southside. You know the one that reeks of texize, urine, stale beer, and cheap cigars. He was telling me that if I vote for him he will see to it that he and his ultra-rich buddies will pay all me taxes. That's the nearest I've ever been to feeling like a dirt road whore being hit-on by an expert lounge lizard.

Let us hope that Trump's tired, old, pick-up lines, that have served him so well with his bimbos, will not work on the voters. Forget it, you ain't gonna get lucky this time, Donald!

Through all this, in the back-ground, a small voice whispered; "A Gore administration would be a Clinton administration without an erection." (c) (patent pending)

I saw Hatch riding on a white salamander heading for Utah.
Senator Hatch had given up the race for the White House but was elected by the Israelis as their special ambassador to Salt Lake City, the undivided, indivisible, eternal capitol of Jerusalem.

Then came George W. Bush. He was wearing a plastic nose and was standing in the oval office where workmen had just finished taking the eagle off the presidential seal and replacing it with that chihuahua dog from Taco Bell. He was speaking Spanglish (?)
and pointing to a new map with Aztlan written large across the South. The room was filled with Rabbis wearing huge sombreros.

Oh, it was so awful, this nightmare! How I would love to be able to tell you that I awoke and everything was fine. Yes, I awoke but, may G-d help us all, the difference between a very bad dream and today's reality is rapidly becoming indistinguishable.

Goodnight America, goodbye beautiful dreams and dreamers, wherever you are, and I wish for you all what, now, seems to be the impossible dream, a Happy New Year!

Woe to Our People's Enemies!

Dr. William Pierce

American Dissident Voices Broadcast of Dec. 25, 1999
Subject: ADV10-16-99: Woe to Our People's Enemies!

I've had several film crews visiting my office during the past few weeks: BBC, the History Channel, the Discovery Channel, Arts and Entertainment; you name it, they've been here. Reporters and photographers from the print media too: the Washington Post, Rolling Stone magazine. The main thing they're focusing on is my acquisition of a couple of record companies for the production and distribution of resistance music. They want to tie that in to my two novels, The Turner Diaries and Hunter -- especially The Turner Diaries -- and suggest that all of the things I do are somehow connected with the growing threat of terrorism in America. Their position is that Timothy McVeigh read The Turner Diaries and got his friends to read the book, and then he blew up the Federal Building in Oklahoma City; therefore, The Turner Diaries is a terrorist book and is responsible for the bombing.

I always tell them, no, my book is not what caused Timothy McVeigh to blow up the Federal Building; it is what the Federal government did in Waco, Texas, two years earlier that caused the bombing. It was the murder of all those women and children in the Mt. Carmel Church by the Clinton administration which made Timothy McVeigh decide that someone had to strike back at a tyrannical and murderous government. Someone had to send the politicians and bureaucrats in Washington a message that there are Americans who will not tolerate such behavior. And I cite the evidence to these media people: Timothy McVeigh went to Waco during the Federal siege of the Branch Davidian church and expressed his outrage to other people who were there. And at the time he was sentenced to death by the Clinton government Timothy told the court why he had bombed the Federal Building. He told the court that the Federal government, by setting the example of terrorism against its own citizens, was provoking counter-terrorism against the government.

Well, of course, the media people already know these things, but they won't report them. They won't put the blame for the bombing on the Clinton government. They love the Clinton government. It's their kind of government. Bill Clinton is their kind of guy. Janet Reno is their kind of butch-feminist attorney general. And all those people the government burned and shot to death in Waco, why, they don't really count. They were just a bunch of wackos; they were separatists; they were unfashionable people; they weren't even liberals. They weren't part of our wonderful TV society, our consumer society, our Clinton-era, feel-good society. They just wanted to be left alone, and people who want to be left alone are dangerous. You can't trust them. It's all right for the government to kill them.

Anyway, the media people certainly are not going to blame the Oklahoma City bombing on the Federal government, with which they identify. They'd much rather blame it on me and on my book, because my book predicts growing terrorism in America and explains why it will grow. And the explanations in my book are not Politically Correct. My book is not in tune with the Clinton era. I am a boat-rocker, and it's people like me, who aren't happy with more diversity and more feminism and more homosexuality and more multiculturalism and more government intrusion into our lives, who are dangerous, who are a threat to everything the media people hold dear.

They take the same attitude toward the music I distribute through my record company, Resistance Records. It is resistance music. It is opposed to everything the Clinton government and the media people stand for. And their position is that my music is responsible for the violence in which young people often are involved. They say that my music is responsible for the anger so many young Americans feel.

And I tell them, no, it's not my resistance music which makes young Americans angry. It is the conditions around them, the conditions in which they are obliged to live, which make them angry. It is the alienating conditions in our society, in our cities, in our schools, which make young people angry. It is being forced to go to school with non-Whites, being forced to live in an increasingly non-White environment, which makes young people angry. It is seeing their heritage stolen from them that makes them angry.

All of that seems clear enough to me, but the media people pretend that they don't understand. How could anyone not like going to school with Blacks? Such a culturally enriching experience! How could anyone not like growing up in the multicultural sewers that our cities have become? How could anyone object to having his heritage taken away, when it's for such a good cause: the cause of more feminism, more homosexuality, and a non-White majority in America? No, no, it couldn't be these things which are alienating young people and making them angry, the media people think, because these are all good things. It must be my music -- or perhaps violent video games, anything except the Clintonista filth, which the media people are helping the Clinton regime ram down our throats.

You know, these media people really cannot imagine why the prospect of a non-White America; a mongrel America; a coffee-colored, Third World America of Black basketball players and rap music and high fives and Ebonics, should make anyone angry. They just can't imagine it. Take a look at Newsweek magazine for this week. It has a picture of what these spiritually sick media liberals want the America of the 21st century to look like. They really want it to be an America without White people. Newsweek, of course, is owned by a Jewish company, the Washington Post Company, but it pretty well represents what all of the media people, Gentles as well as Jews, think. And they believe that is the way everyone else should think. They don't understand why their vision of America should make young people angry. So it must be my music. It must be people like me who are making young Americans angry by providing them with Politically Incorrect music.

I tell the media people that the purpose of resistance music is not to make young people alienated or angry; instead it is to give them a rationale for their alienation and a target for their anger. It is to explain to them why they are alienated; it is to help them understand the causes of their alienation by showing them who and what are responsible for the alienating conditions around them. The purpose of resistance music is to direct their anger outward, toward a proper target, so that their anger will not become self-destructive but instead can help them by helping our people.

But whenever I say something like this to a media person I just get a vacant smile. What I'm saying either doesn't register because it's too far off his wavelength, or he's deliberately tuning me out because he knows that if he really reports accurately what I'm telling him he'll need to look for another career shortly thereafter. I'm inclined to believe that in most cases it's the former: at least, in the case of the rank and file reporters and writers. The media bosses, the ones who set the party line, lie deliberately, but the media people in the ranks tend to be a highly socialized group, very dependent on their interactions with their peers. I don't think they're even capable of independent thought. They can think only as a group. Each of them can think only what the others are thinking. If you put one of them in a room by himself somewhere, his brain would just shut down until another media person came into the room. Perhaps this is the way people tend to be who were raised in day-care centers, always surrounded by other children when they were very young.

Be that as it may, whether the media people deliberately twist and distort the reality they present to the public or do it unconsciously, it really is a big problem for all of us. Most Americans depend almost entirely on the mass media -- on television, radio, newspapers, and newsmagazines -- for everything they know, or think they know, about the world outside their own neighborhoods. And when that view of the world is distorted, is falsified, then we have difficulty making correct decisions and acting in a way that is consistent with our interests as a people.

There are other ways of learning about the world besides watching network television, of course. One can find out almost anything by using the Internet as a research tool. By learning where to look and how to read critically, one can pretty well get around the media controllers -- which is why they're working so hard now to try to build public support for their effort to control the Internet too, so that they can censor it. They want to protect us from pornography and terrorism, they tell us. What they really want to do is protect us from the truth, because if most Americans had any hint of the truth, the media bosses would have to start swimming for Israel to save their hides.

Well, as far as the public is concerned all of that is pretty much irrelevant. Expecting the general public to read anything critically or to learn how to use the Internet for research is just a pipe dream. The public may use the Internet for on-line shopping, but for 99 per cent of them that's it. Most of them always will get their news and their ideas from the easiest source, which is television, and they will believe what they see on the screen and what Tom Brokaw or Peter Jennings or Dan Rather tells them to believe.

Is that important? Is it really important what fools believe?

Well, yes, it is important. In the first place, we still have a crazy system where what the couch potatoes and lemmings believe has a big influence on public policy and on the type of government in Washington. When evil men, whose interests are diametrically opposed to the interests of our own people, are able to determine what the voters believe, then that is a matter of concern to us. That is the root of most of our problems today, this deliberate deception of the voters by the media bosses.

But even if couch potatoes weren't allowed to vote, we still should care what they believe. We often may be contemptuous of people who can't think for themselves and who are so easily misled, but the fact is they make up the bulk of our people, and if we want a truly healthy society again, we need for even the sports fans to have at least a rudimentary understanding of what's happening in the world and why. We want at least the great bulk of our people supporting the goals of our society.

Anyway, that's in the future. Let me give you a very specific example of the way in which the masses of the American people are fooled today. I'm sure that you remember the massacre at Columbine High School in Littleton, Colorado, in April. I've already spoken about that at length on earlier broadcasts. The slant that the media people immediately tried to put on that massacre was that the two killers were neo-Nazis of some sort, or at the very least White racists, who had deliberately targeted Black students. And they put this slant on it knowing that one of the killers was a Jew -- hardly the neo-Nazi type -- that only one of the 13 victims was a Black, and that both killers were explicitly anti-racists and talked about how they wanted to kill White racists. And it has been this slant which has stuck in the public mind, even though the facts have been available, not only on the Internet but even in some widely distributed print media. It is television which makes a lasting impression on the average sports fan, not the news on the inside pages of the New York Times.

Even now, with excerpts appearing in Time magazine from the transcript of a video the two killers made before the massacre, most couch potatoes still believe they were neo-Nazis, because that's what Tom Brokaw and Peter Jennings and Dan Rather told them back in April and have been hinting at ever since. We need to get those neo-Nazis under control. We need new "hate crime" laws. That's the media message. Even with the video made by the killers now public, you can ask most sports fans, "Hey, you remember those two neo-Nazis who shot all the kids at Columbine High School?" and they'll answer, "Yeah, I remember them." Which just goes to show that it's a lot easier to fool people than it is to un-fool them.

Nevertheless, the video made by Klebold and Harris is very interesting, because it ties in with some other issues I've commented on. One of the first things that struck me when I read the transcript of the video the two killers made in Klebold's basement was the statement made separately by both the killers in slightly different words to the effect that they hated everyone: "It's humans that I hate," Klebold said. That reminded me of something the first-century Roman historian Tacitus wrote about the Jews more than 1900 years ago, and I quote: "They hate all humanity, except their fellow Jews," Tacitus wrote.

Christians, especially, seemed to be hated by the two killers, and they made a number of obscene and derogatory comments about those of their fellow students who were Christians whom they intended to kill. Is this something Klebold learned from his Jewish mother? We don't really know, and we certainly won't find out from Tom Brokaw. One thing which is clear from their video, however, is the almost total sense of alienation felt by the young killers. They really hated the world.

Now, they certainly didn't learn that hatred from reading one of my novels or listening to the resistance music I distribute or from visiting one of my Internet web sites or even from playing violent video games -- and yet Jewish groups and much of the media have been trying to convince the public that they did. Actually, there are some trendy folks out there who are an easy sell for that theory. There are people in America -- White people -- who really believe that things are getting better and better as they become more and more "diverse," more and more chaotic, more and more multicultural, more and more Jewish. They can't imagine why young people should be more likely to be alienated growing up rootless in the Clinton era. I mean, it just couldn't be the feminism and the homosexuality and the racial mixing and the behavior of the Federal government -- all of those things are just so wonderful -- so it must be those awful heterosexual White males who put hate on the Internet and write hateful novels and distribute hateful music.

Anyway, the value in the video that Klebold and Harris made, and the reason that you should read the transcript on the Internet or at least read the excerpts in Time magazine this week, is that it provides a horrifically graphic picture of the depth of the alienation and the intensity of the rage inside many young Americans today. And keep in mind that Klebold and Harris were not my kind of young Americans. They had no healthy racial feelings, no understanding of what was happening to their world. One of them was a Jew. And yet they were totally alienated. This sickness around us -- this liberal, Jewish, feminist, egalitarian sickness -- corrupts everyone. The video Klebold and Harris made will convince you, if you weren't already convinced, that the world young Americans are growing up in is profoundly unnatural and unhealthy. Some adjust to it, more or less, but a growing number do not. Instead, they become alienated, and they become filled with rage, and in the years ahead there will be hell to pay.

This Klebold-Harris video being made public now is a fluke. It gives a perceptive few a chance to see some evidence that they wouldn't otherwise have seen. It's not likely to sink into the consciousness of the sports fans, however, because it won't get the intensive TV coverage the original story got. Most couch potatoes still will believe that Klebold and Harris were neo-Nazis who learned to hate from the Internet and from listening to the wrong kind of music. And so most Americans still won't have a clue as to why more and more young Americans are intensely alienated and angry. And not having a clue, they're not likely to exert any pressure on the government to change things in the right direction. And that's the way the media people want it. They like the way things are going now, and they intend to keep on protecting the voters from the truth.

Listen! Being in the resistance music business has given me an even better opportunity than before to talk with young Americans. When I tell you that their alienation and rage are growing, I know what I'm talking about. There are hundreds of thousands of young, White Americans who would like nothing better than to rip out the throats of the people who have made their lives pointless and meaningless. You can't build enough prisons to hold them all. You can't become safe by passing new gun control laws. The rage building now will find a way out. My aim is to help it find the right way, a constructive way. Not the Klebold and Harris way, certainly, but a way which will result in a lot of throats being ripped out nevertheless: the throats of the people who have been deliberately destroying our world, stealing our heritage, and trying their damndest to keep the American people from learning the truth and healing themselves.

We will be healed. We will be cleansed. We will bring the truth to our people despite the controlled media. We will take our heritage back. The young people who listen to resistance music will be the vanguard of our army of liberation. Woe to those who try to stand in their way!
